

How Work-Life Helps: Immigration

The Work-Life team can provide assistance and research regarding a variety of immigration support resources. Some of these services can include:

- Helping refugees resettle in the country by providing interpreter services, employment training, job placement, support groups and counseling services
- Legal services to clients with family-based cases, applications for legal residence/citizenship, deferred action for childhood arrivals, resources can include:
 - Legal benefit/consultation and referrals for community-based organizations – see below for examples
- Travel information specific to the visa the immigrant has
 - Where can travel or not travel based on visa
- ESL classes/GED programs/Colleges
- Information regarding health insurance options for people immigrating to the United States
- Medical clinics for uninsured
- Finding local immigration/consulate office to assist immigrants
 - Based on what the issue is and from what country immigrant is from
- Offering immigrants and refugees research and referrals for local community services, such as:
 - Emergency financial assistance, childcare, after school programs, senior services, housing, etc.
- Referrals for culturally sensitive elder/childcare services
 - For example: home care agencies, care centers/facilities, day care with multilingual staff and/or activities geared towards specific cultures
